What we do and what that delivers...

Blue Schools link WASH in Schools with environmental education and practice. Through simple technologies and practical exercises, students learn about drinking water, hygiene and water in our environment.

The step-by-step approach of Blue Schools starts with WASH in school and progresses to locally relevant and sustainable land and water management techniques. School stakeholders develop Blue Schools activities that align with subjects on health and environment anchored in the national curriculum.

Student-led activities help youth to influence their families and communities, building their leadership capacities as future water and environment champions and policy makers.
